

Achievements (cont.)

Joe Traugott. Photography by Ellen Zieselman

Joe Traugott wins Ralph Emerson Twitchell Award

Joseph Traugott, author of the Museum of New Mexico Press's New Mexico Art through Time: Prehistory to the Present and curator of the New Mexico Museum of Art's It's about Time: 14,000 Years of Art in New Mexico, has won the Ralph Emerson Twitchell Award, given by the Historical Society of New Mexico. Traugott previously received the award for The Art of New Mexico: How the West Is One (also published by MNMP).

Honors for DCA's Marketing Team and El Palacio

The Marketing and Outreach team of the Museum Resources Division of the New Mexico Department of Cultural Affairs was honored in April in Washington, DC, by the National Association of Government Communicators. Blue Pencil and Gold Screen Awards were given to the "Wrap Up Your Holidays" advertising supplement, promoting museums in the Santa Fe New Mexican, and to Don J. Usner's slideshow Don Victor Ortega in Chimayó and at the Constitutional Convention, which is online at elpalacio.org.

Mapping

Icicle Aisle is in the newly mapped and surveyed course of the almost 12 mile Snowy River Passage located on BLM lands (Fort Stanton - Snowy River Cave National Conservation Area). More than eleven miles have now been mapped and about half of that in the last 2-3 years! This has been a totally new and exciting challenge for the cavers and scientists who make up this project.

The Board has designed and formatted a beautiful full color brochure describing the work, research and goals for the non-profit Fort Stanton Cave Study Project. Copies may be obtained by contacting Lynda Sánchez or checking our website www.fscsp.org.

Lynda A. Sánchez, Board Member and Public Outreach Liaison Fort Stanton Cave Study Project

Photo by James Hunter, courtesy of Fort Stanton Cave Study Project